GRACE'S PICK

Moor Allure Naturals

Don't you hate it when you wash your face but it still feels dirty? Well imagine my surprise when I washed my face with dirt and it not only felt clean, but looked radiant, actually. My saviour: Moor Allure Naturals, a new Canadian skincare line founded by Jan Blacktopp who has been studying natural medicine for over 30 years. Her peat-based products are gentle on the skin and the earth. Plus, they're 99% natural and full of antioxidants. I love product, but easily become baffled by the abundance of facial lotions, potions, serums and balms. And, my morning face-washing routine has to be quick and easy. So when I discovered that each package was discreetly numbered 1, 2 and 3, I breathed a quiet sigh of relief. I started with the Purifying Facial Cleanser bar ($20). (Warning: this product will soon become popular with the male members of your family, too). I followed this with a spritz of the Soothing Herbal Toner ($45) which smells just like my new obsession at Starbucks – green tea lemonade (unsweetened). Then, I slathered on some Skin Renewal Moisturizer ($65). In less than five minutes and in three easy steps I was glowing and out the door – well, out the bathroom door. Now if only deciding what to wear were this easy...
