Pretty Peaty

We learned a lot from our first kiss. It was Grade 6, he was called Ugly Timmy (kids can be so cruel) and he was surprisingly spectacular at smooching. The lesson: From not so attractive sources can come many a beautiful thing.

A more adult case in point: Moor Allure, an entire skincare routine derived from 30,000-year-old rare Canadian sedge grass moor peat. We know, bog beauty doesn't sound so appealing. But after a few days using this 99% natural line, our skin was not only visibly glowing, it also had the softness normally reserved for a baby's bottom.

We start with the bar of

Purifying Facial Cleanser ($20). Once we've rinsed off the lather, the Soothing Herbal Toner ($45) applies easily with a spritz (so our routine doesn't fall apart when we run out of cotton balls). The final step to our fresh and glowing face is the quick-absorbing Skin Renewal Moisturizer ($65).

And with such good results, we've quickly added in the once-a-week products, including a Radiance Mask ($45) and Silky Soft Exfoliant ($20) that both do exactly what their name implies. If you're a fan of a deal, you can get all the products plus a facial scrub brush for $190.

We knew giving it up to Ugly Timmy would be well worth it.
